1. On 14 March 1953, the Eggesin KVPD numbered 1,900 to 2,000 men and allegedly included the headquarters and a number of elements of the division. Some of the soldiers observed in the barracks installation, which was occupied to capacity, wore black-bordered blue, and some wore red-bordered black patches.¹
2. Weapons stored at the parking lots of the barracks installation included thirty-three 122-mm guns with splittrail gun carriages, twelve 76.2-mm AT guns, and 30 to 40 other guns of undetermined models. Seven two-axle armored scout cars and four radio trucks which were connected with a low wooden building were also at the parking lots. Fourteen 8 to 10 man squads were observed receiving basic training without weapons on the drill ground inside the barracks installation.
